

SOMETIMES A MISTAKE IS INTERESTING

Posted on 2017-05-23 2019-12-16 by spd_wp_admin

Dear Reader,

Yesterday was a good morning at Big Hills Springs Provincial Park just outside of Calgary. My friend Keith and I went for a photo tour. The place was new to us both. My one objective was to photograph water. I am pleased with the results. For this particular waterfall 1/50 of second seemed to work better than 1/25 of a second. ISO was 160. As well, there was this happy accident that once cropped and straightened made me smile.

As always, comments are sought and welcome.

© Sean P. Bayliss
2017-05-22-big-hills-springs-1 -

Sean B. Drysdale
2017-05-22-big-hills-springs-2 -

2017-05-22-big-hills-springs-3 -

2017-05-22-big-hills-springs-4 -

© Sean P Drysdale

2017-05-22-big-hills-springs-5 -

Cheers, Sean

One Reply to “Sometimes A Mistake Is Interesting”

1. keith says:

2017-05-24 at 19:22 Edit

It was a thoroughly enjoyable morning! I'm still chewing through photos, looking for the keepers. Finding the schedule for eastbound trains and waiting at the curve might get some interesting shots.

Copyright © 2024 Sean P Drysdale. All Rights Reserved.