

A WALK IN A PARK

Posted on 2019-10-28 2019-10-28 by spd_wp_admin

Dear Reader,

I have recently handed in my resignation, and now I can get back to important things like sharing my recent wanders with you. Yesterday was a walk in a park with an old friend and new friends whom I had never met. The park was the western end of Fish Creek. Keith was our enthusiastic lead wanderer. Before I left the house, I decided my constraints would be my 35 mm (on a crop sensor), and a tripod. At the start of the wander, I waffled about the tripod constraint. As you can see from the images below, waffling was resolved.

All the photos are 4s except for photo 5. That one is really a 3.5 because the focus is off. But, I did take my shoes and socks off and waded into the f..g freezing creek with the tripod. I give myself points for seeing the image. I lose points on the execution. Maybe, next time I will carry boots with me.

For the record the image that is currently holding my attention the longest is the vertical one – go figure.

A walk in a park is always rewarding – it was a good wander with good people.

Cheers, Sean

4 Replies to “A Walk in A Park”

1. Andrea Belcher says:

2019-11-01 at 06:21 Edit

Nice meeting you! Love the images.

1. spd_wp_admin says:

2019-11-02 at 07:34 Edit

I enjoyed meeting you too. It is so nice to have a new visitor and commenter. Thank you for both. Cheers, Sean

2. Keith says:

2019-10-29 at 08:53 Edit

Glad you enjoyed the walk! Kind of a pity that the icy dam photo didn't totally work out, given what efforts you went to in order to get it. i'm really liking the one with red leaves.

1. spd_wp_admin says:

2019-10-29 at 19:41 Edit

Thank you for visiting and commenting.