

A WALKING REPORT 26

Part 01 of 02 parts

Posted on 2022-05-23 2023-03-22 by spd_wp_admin

Dear Reader (2022-05-23),

I keep procrastinating on writing this post. In my mind the post gets bigger, and the delays continue. Well, enough of that. Grab a beverage and let's get on with it. In today's post there is some tidying up to do, news about a new project, and the return of the walking reports.

Tidying Up

As some of you know, in April, I returned from another personal-matters trip to the UK. As much as I love living in Alberta, I miss the sea. While, in the UK I drove down to Dorset. Some of you may have even seen the images in sets 1 and 2. My real photographic mission was to try and capture that thin line of hope, possibility and infinity that I get from watching the sea. There is also the timeless loop of waves sliding up onto the shore and then receding. And, sometimes the poetry of the seaside is simpler than that. In keeping with some of the ideas embedded in the photographic medium such as time and memory, I also have a long running interest in ghosts (3-04). I'm not entirely pleased or displeased with the resulting set 3.

Set 1

1-01

1-02

1-03

1-04

1-05

1-06

1-07

Set 02

2-01

2-02

2-03

2-04

2-05

2-06

2-07

2-08

2-09

2-10

2-11

Set 3 Continued Next Document

Copyright © 2024 Sean P Drysdale. All Rights Reserved.