

FIVE STANS 07

Posted on 2023-10-29 by spd_wp_admin

Dear Reader (2023-10-29),

In today's post we continue exploring the Karakol region of Kyrgyzstan by going for a 3 / 4 hour walk along a dirt road, and up a sandstone hill. In this pleasant wander:

- ~ We stop on the return trip to photograph a Golden Eagle trainer (captured with permission),
- ~ We meet a future horseman (captured with permission),
- ~ Note that some horses are hobbled, and others are contained in different ways
- ~ Observe that one side of the gravel road is certainly greener than the other,
- ~ Smile as a group yoga session begins.

01

02

03

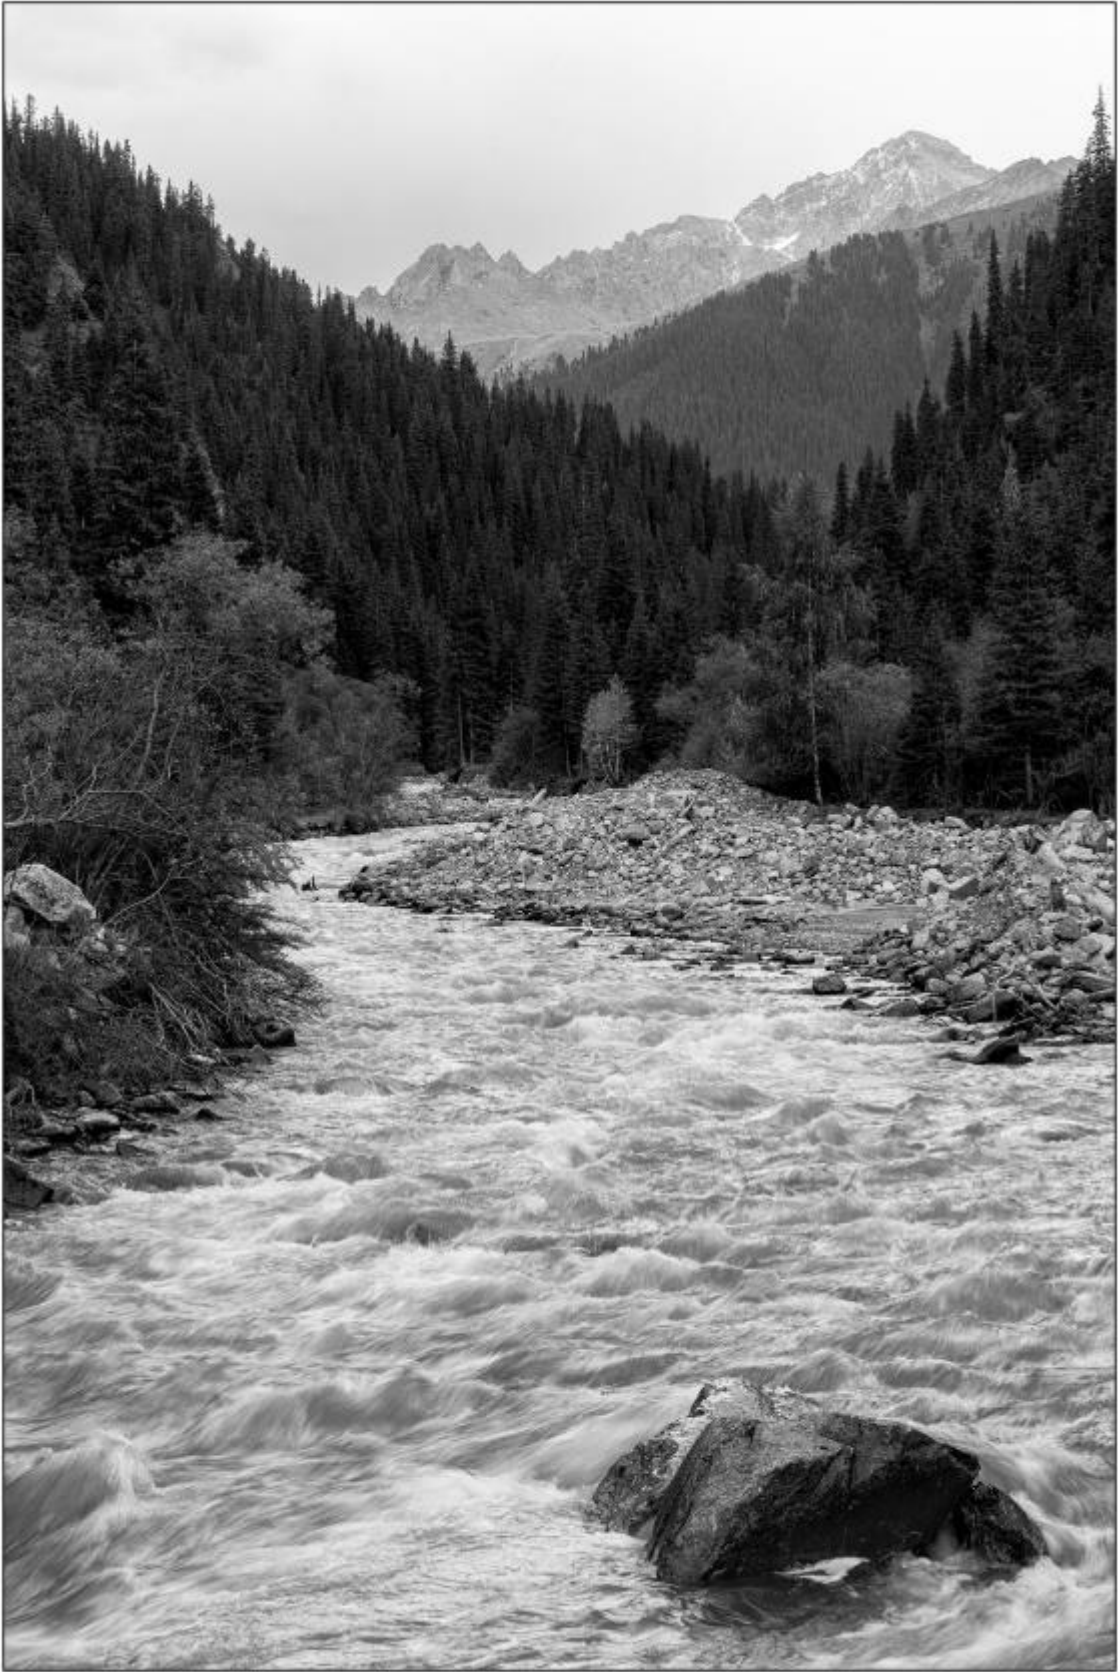

04

05

06

09

10

11

12

One Reply to “Five Stans 07”

1. Keith Cartmell says:

2023-10-30 at 15:37 Edit

I think I'm seeing this series out of order now.

1- What a lovely bird!

6- That looks like a peaceful place. I note there isn't a yoga mat in sight. I know people that actual think that if it isn't done on a yoga mat, it isn't yoga.

7- Nailed the texture of the water!

8- That's one way to save on fencing costs, but they're gonna have a problem if it rains.

9- I am curious about the strand leading from the yurt off to the right. Is is a rope? Could it be an electrical cord?

12- Something about this pleases me, and tickles my brain for the comparison. It reminds me of something, but I don't know what at this moment. No doubt it will come to me a moment after hitting the post comment button.